THE revised edition of Low's Pocket Cable Code contains an Appendix of useful phrases which were wanting in the first and second editions, and which will be found of value.

It also contains some slight changes in code words which it is not anticipated will interfere with the use of the former editions. The translated meanings have not been altered, and an individual using one edition and not finding a word in a telegram received, can invariably use the word occupying the same alphabetical place.

The possibilities of misconstruction necessitated the substitution of these few code words for those in former editions.

THE value of a Cable Code to the traveling community is now so generally recognized that it is superfluous to enlarge upon its advantages. Indeed, no experienced traveler would consider his (or her) traveling equipments complete without a code of some description.

The Cable Codes for the traveling public now in existence are very limited in number, and, without in the least detracting from their value, may be said to fall short of the increasing requirements of the tourist. The practice, too, of the compilers of such publications of classifying the sentences under various Headings has been found irksome, especially to the uninitiated, besides often entailing loss of valuable time.

To provide, therefore, a Cable Code of a more comprehensive and yet simple character for the traveler has been the aim of this publication.

The construction of Low's Pocket Cable Code, by being arranged in alphabetical form, is so simple that any person, without the least knowledge of Telegraph Codes, can readily understand it, while the information in connection therewith—for instance, the International Telegraph Rates,—will be found absolutely indispensable in the use of this or any other publication of a similar kind. Hence Low's Pocket Cable Code should commend itself to everyone using Codes for sending messages by wire.

GENERAL REMARKS.

WITH the aid of this Code, travelers are not only able to hold direct communication, by cable, with their relatives and friends abroad, notifying them, for instance, of their safe arrival, the state of their health, their pecuniary and other pressing needs, etc., but can also arrange, by wire, while traveling in Europe, for their homeward passages by any Line, through Low's Exchange, London, as well as to clearly express their wishes regarding the disposition of their letters and telegrams which they may have directed to their care, at a considerable saving in the cost of transmission.

One example will doubtless suffice to make our meaning intelligible to the reader. Say a Mr. Robinson intends making a tour in Italy, and on arriving at Brussels desires to have his letters which he has had addressed to Low's Exchange, London, sent to the care of Messrs. Bigwood & Morgan, Bankers of that city. On turning to the words "Letters" in the Code, he will find that he is directed to refer to "Forward" re Letters. Then, on referring to the European Bankers—(who have been selected on account of their business relations being principally with American Travelers)—he will observe that the telegraphic address of that firm is "Bigwood." Hence, he will wire, Low's Exchange, London, as follows:

" Afternoon, London,
Healthiest Bigwood, (Signed) Robinson,"

which reads:—"Forward all letters for me here, care of Bigwood & Morgan,"—thus saving at least eight words.

The other distinct advantages which this Code offer are: Its general circulation among the principal European Bankers and Hotels, so that should the tourist, in the course of his travels, have mislaid his copy, as it may sometimes happen, he (or she) will have little or no difficulty in securing another copy for reference. Secondly, in the pecuniary interest of those travelers using this Code, the principal London hotels and certain of the leading foreign hotels—as specified on pages 206-208—are prepared to receive and give best attention to telegrams that may be addressed to them in the language of this Code, regarding accommodation.

Besides the great saving effected in the cost of transmission of Cables by the use of the Low's Pocket Cable Code (examples of which are given below) a still further saving may be gained by the traveler abroad and the relative or friend at home selecting, at the outset, some distinguishing cable address, and registering same before sailing at Low's Exchange, New York.

In this way supposing your name to be Robinson, you do not take your own name for fear someone else may have the same, but you compose a word of the letters of your name or take the first two syllables, viz.: "Robin." This is registered opposite the address of your family, and upon receipt of a wire reading "Edlow New York Dreameth Robin," it is translated to mean "Cannot say when shall be able to sail," and sent direct to your family without further cost if in New York or by collect telegram if outside the city.

One word of advice to those using Codes, i. e. Let the messages be written so legibly that the operator will have no difficulty in reading it.

CAST YOUR BURDENS ON ANOTHER !

MR. LONGMAN—Will you tell me, ladies, how it happens you are so well cared for and have managed this baggage business so nicely without a gentleman's assistance ?

MRS. WIDEAWAKE (laughing)—We did have a gentleman's assistance. We let Mr. Edwin H. Low take care of our baggage, and he not only had us met by a representative of the road, but checked everything through to London. We haven't got to worry over anything, as it will all be at the hotel when we get there.

MR. SMARTWEED—By jove ! you're in luck. Where is Low's place to be found ?

MRS. WIDEAWAKE—Why, everybody knows of it. His New York Office is No. 949 Broadway, right near the Fifth Avenue Hotel, and his London Office is 57 Charing Cross, on Trafalgar Square. In addition to checking baggage, he stores and insures it in London—in fact, does anything necessary for a traveler's convenience.

MR. LONGMAN and MR. SMARTWEED (together)—Good enough ! He's the man for us. Good day, ladies !

EXCELSIOR !

MISS FIDGET—I have given instructions to have all my letters and cables sent to your care, and I want some information. What must I do to register a cipher cable word ?

MR. LOW—It is very simple. I will cut a letter off your name and register "Fidge" to mean Miss A. Fidget, Carleton House Terrace, London. The same word registered in New York means your mother, Mrs. Fidget, 560 Fifth Avenue, New York. When you want to cable you send or come here and we reduce your message by means of our Code, send it to the New York Office, which translates the message and communicates it to Mrs. Fidget at once. You pay for the number of words in cipher instead of four or five times the amount which a straight message would cost.

MISS FIDGET—Well, now how about letters when I am traveling ?

MR. LOW—All letters received for you are numbered on the outside in red ink. 1, 2, 3, 4, etc. We forward promptly according to instructions, and as each letter is sent out its destination is entered in our letter book. For instance, we enter 5, 6 and 7 as sent to the Hotel Binda, Paris. If you leave the Binda before they reach you we can send and get them, in this way it is impossible to have one lost, and by watching the consecutive numbers and keeping us posted as to your points we can assure prompt service. We charge $1.00 per month or $2.50 for three months for this.

CHORUS OF PEOPLE IN THE OFFICE—And it is well worth the service—we can testify to it.
